Life asleep under the ermine coat offers to the cristalline air echos scattered away on the snow field sowed with crows where drops anchor the night flooding the horizon

Under the shroud and vermine the yearning soul cries in echos scattered away on the blank page sowed with full stops where the inkwell overturns like the horizon